What is a policy violation

SponsoredThis Section / Page contains links to the 3rd party websites of our top partners from whom we may receive compensation. Patreon, a subscription platform for artists and creatives, has de-platformed a Ukrainian non-profit that is running a crowdfunding campaign to support the country's military against a Russian invasion."We don't allow Patreon to be used for funding weapons or military activity. It is a violation of our policies, and so we have removed the page," the statement said, adding that all remaining funds in the charity's account will be refunded to contributors.Come Back Alive claims to have raised around $670,000 in just one day this week, according to a Bloomberg report from Thursday.Taras Chmut, director of Come Back Alive, told CNBC on Thursday that Patreon was the most convenient platform for foreigners looking to send donations.The charity's website lists multiple ways to donate funds including using payment system Swift and bank accounts. So far, Patreon seems to be the only fundraising method to be disrupted.The charity is also raising funds in bitcoin, and has received close to $5 million worth of bitcoin to one wallet address listed on its website, according to data from Blockchain.com. Only around $150,000 worth of bitcoin have left the wallet so far.On Friday, Ukraine's official Twitter account posted a link to the Come Back Alive donation page, which includes details for its bitcoin wallet. It is unclear how the funds are currently being distributed as the charity has not updated its reporting on donations since Wednesday.UPDATE (Feb. 25 20:56 UTC): Added details about Ukraine's official Twitter account. DISCLOSUREThe leader in news and information on cryptocurrency, digital assets and the future of money, CoinDesk is a media outlet that strives for the highest journalistic standards and abides by a strict set of editorial policies. CoinDesk is an independent operating subsidiary of Digital Currency Group, which invests in cryptocurrencies and blockchain startups. As part of their compensation, certain CoinDesk employees, including editorial employees, may receive exposure to DCG equity in the form of stock appreciation rights, which vest over a multi-year period. CoinDesk journalists are not allowed to purchase stock outright in DCG. April 2022 You may not publish or post other people's private information without their express authorization and permission. We also prohibit threatening to expose private information or incentivizing others to do so. In addition, you may not share private media, such as images or videos of private individuals, without their consent. However, we recognise that there are instances where users may share images or videos of private individuals, who are not public figures, as part of a newsworthy event or to further public discourse on issues or events of public interest. In such cases, we may allow the media to remain on the platform. Sharing someone's private information: Sharing someone's private information online without their permission, sometimes called doxxing, is a breach of their privacy and of the Twitter Rules. Sharing private information can pose serious safety and security risks for those affected and can lead to physical, emotional, and financial hardship. When reviewing reports under this policy, we consider a number of things, including: What type of information is being shared? We take this into consideration because certain types of private information carry higher risks than others, if they're shared without permission. Our primary aim is to protect individuals from potential physical harm as a result of their information being shared, so we consider information such as physical location and phone numbers to be a higher risk than other types of information. Who is sharing the information? We also consider who is sharing the reported information and whether or not they have the consent of the person it belongs to. We do this because we know that there are times when people may want some forms of their personal information to be shared publicly. For example, sharing a personal phone number or email for professional networking or to coordinate social events or publicly sharing someone's home addresses to seek help after a natural disaster. Is the information available elsewhere online? If the reported information was shared somewhere else before it was shared on Twitter, e.g., someone sharing their personal phone number on their own publicly accessible website, we may not treat this information as private, as the owner has made it publicly available. Note: we may take action against home addresses being shared, even if they are publicly available, due to the potential for physical harm. Why is the information being shared? We also factor in the intent of the person sharing the information. For example, if we believe that someone is sharing information with an abusive intent, or to harass or encourage others to harass another person, we will take action. On the other hand, if someone is sharing information in an effort to help someone involved in a crisis situation like in the aftermath of a violent event, we may not take action. Sharing private media: Posting images is an important part of our users' experience on Twitter. Where individuals have a reasonable expectation of privacy in an individual piece of media, we believe they should be able to determine whether or not it is shared. Sharing such media could potentially violate users' privacy and may lead to emotional or physical harm. When we are notified by individuals depicted, or their authorized representative, that they did not consent to having media shared, we will remove the media. This policy is not applicable to public figures. What is in violation of this policy? Under this policy, you can't share the following types of private information, without the permission of the person who it belongs to: home address or physical location information, including street addresses, GPS coordinates or other identifying information related to locations that are considered private;identity documents, including government-issued IDs and social security or other national identity numbers - note: we may make limited exceptions in regions where this information is not considered to be private;contact information, including non-public personal phone numbers or email addresses; financial account information, including bank account and credit card details;other private information, including biometric data or medical records;media of private individuals without the permission of the person(s) depicted; andmedia depicting prisoners of war posted by government or state-affiliated media accounts on or after April 5, 2022. The following behaviors are also not permitted: threatening to publicly expose someone's private information;sharing information that would enable individuals to hack or gain access to someone's private information without their consent,e.g., sharing sign-in credentials for online banking services;asking for or offering a bounty or financial reward in exchange for posting someone's private information;asking for a bounty or financial reward in exchange for not posting someone's private information, sometimes referred to as blackmail. What is not a violation of this policy? The following are not in violation of this policy: people sharing their own private information;sharing information that is publicly available elsewhere, in a non-abusive manner; andsharing information that we don't consider to be private, including:name;birthdate or age;place of education or employment;location information related to commercial property or places of business, where this information is publicly available;descriptions of physical appearance;gossip, rumours, accusations, and allegations; andscreenshots of text messages or messages from other platforms (unless they contain private information e.g., phone number). For media, the following are not in violation of our policy: the media is publicly available or is being covered by mainstream media;the media and the accompanying tweet text add value to the public discourse or are shared in public interest;contains eyewitness accounts or on the ground reports from developing events; the subject of the media is a public figure. Who can report violations of this policy? Sharing private information: Anyone can report private information that has been shared in a clearly abusive way (whether they have a Twitter account or not). In cases where the information hasn't been shared with a clearly abusive intent, we need to hear directly from the owner of this information (or an authorized representative, such as a lawyer) before taking enforcement action. Sharing private media: When reporting private media, we need a first person report in order to make the determination that the image or video has been shared without their permission. We accept reports from: Individuals depicted in the reported media orTheir authorized representative such as: a. parents/legal guardians, b. lawyers, or c. legal representative.
